For the last four decades, the melodic strains of the MINNE HA-HA's steam calliopo have wafted over the Village of Lake George. From Memorial Day through Columbus Day, its clarion call can be heard six to seven times each day, so much so that some locals even use it as a way to keep time during the busy season. The calliopo has become an integral part of the fabric of the community, and its humble beginnings can be traced back to a small village not far from our own.

In 1855, a farmer named Joshua C. Stoddard, of Worcester, VT, invented a peculiar instrument consisting of several graduated steam whistles with corresponding valves sitting atop a long pipe, or manifold. These valves were connected with a system of levers and wires to a small keyboard. Pressing a key would pull these wires and levers, opening the valve and allowing steam to flow from the pipe into the whistle. On October 9th of that year, the patent for his "American Patented Steam Piano" was approved. Stoddard had built the instrument not for use aboard a boat, but rather as a replacement for the bells in the tower of his local church. During that first Vermont winter, his "Steam Piano" had many issues. Not only was the volume too much for the other parishioners, but the pipes were not insulated. Many ended up bursting, rendering the instrument inoperable. A defeated Stoddard removed the instrument from the steeple, and placed it in a barn on his property. While this could have very well been the end of this unique piece of machinery, fate intervened. Stoddard's brother was a steamboat captain on the Hudson River in New York. At that time, companies were pondering ways to attract more business. The story goes that he remembered his brother's invention, and asked Joshua if he could place it aboard the boat he was in command of. He agreed, and rest is history! While the instrument became commonplace on excursion boats and showboats alike, they also had a strong reputation in the circus world. In the late 1850's, circus magnet P.T. Barnum acquired a "patented Steam Piano" to include in his circus parade.

In 1973, the Lake George Steamboat Company founded its southern sister company, the New Orleans Steamboat Company, and embarked on a journey to build a magnificent sternwheel steamboat to run excursion trips in the New Orleans. Since the calliope had strong ties to the Inland Rivers, and especially excursion vessels, it was decided to have an instrument constructed for the new boat. Owners Wilbur E. Dow Jr. and Bill Dow contracted the Frisbie Engine and Machine Company of Cincinnati, OH, to build two calliopes for them. One was to go to the new build in Louisiana, which would eventually be the Str. NATCHEZ, and the other would go to the MINNE-HA-HA, or the "MINNE" as she is affectionately called. Cincinnati was no stranger to the instrument. Not only had numerous riverboats played their calliopes while visiting the city, but two major calliope builders had been located there! The first was Thomas J. Nichol who, in the early 1900's, built what some believe to be the best sounding steam calliopes ever produced. The second was Ernest J. Wilde, who built several instruments in the 1950's and 1960's. While the Frisbie Company had never built a calliope before, they had been in business since 1874, and were renowned for their steam engines and pumps. Jess Coen, the owner of the company at the time, took drawings and measurements from both Nichol and Wilde calliopes, and fused the two designs together. What he produced was, arguably, one of the finest examples of the instrument ever crafted: 32 graduated brass steam whistles, electronically-operated solenoid valves for ease of use, and corresponding lightbulbs that lit up the steam at night, creating something akin to the Northern Lights and known as the "Aurora Effect". By early summer 1974, the first instrument was completed. It was shipped up to Lake George and installed aboard the "MINNE", where it was played for the first time on July 2nd of that year.

For almost 20 years, the Frisbie instrument was played aboard the "MINNE". The calliope sat directly in front of the pilothouse, and the keyboard was located inside the pilothouse and underneath the forward port-side window. While not much exists in the way of pictures or recordings of this calliope, the boat's calliope player, Marilyn Buehler, had a couple good close-up shots of it in action, one of which is included in this article. By the time 1992 rolled around, the calliope was in need of some TLC. The instrument was sent out to a company in Iowa for refurbishment, and in the meantime, a smaller calliope was placed onboard. Through a series of unfortunate events over the course of the following year, the Frisbie calliope was sold to a gaming boat in Natchez, MS, where it was put on display on the top deck of the boat. After a short time, the whistles were removed, placed in storage, and then lost in time. To this day, they have not been found. The calliope that had been placed on the “MINNE” as a ‘temp’ became her permanent instrument. This calliope had been built by Ernest J. Wilde in the early 1960’s, and had been aboard a party boat in the Cincinnati harbor. Strangely enough, it is believed that this was one of the instruments Jess Coen used for measurements to make his calliopes in the 1970’s! The construction of these whistles were different from the Frisbie. Wilde’s whistles were long and slender, and looked almost like an assembly of mortar shells. Other instruments of his were placed aboard the ELIZABETH LOUISE of Sacramento, CA and the BELLE OF LOUISVILLE of Louisville, KY. With the change in instrument, the location of it was changed as well. Instead of sitting in front of the pilothouse as the Frisbie had, the Wilde calliope was moved forward of the port smokestack. The manifold was shorter, and could fit in the space better. This also increased the visibility of the instrument, allowing for an unobstructed view of the calliope from the pier below for the first time. In the summer of 2004, yours truly played his first song on the Wilde, igniting a love for the calliope and its operation. It had not been taken care of in some time, and needed some work. I made it my mission to make it a showpiece again. While some brass polish and a fresh coat of paint made it look better, there was only so much that could be done to get it back in prime operational shape. I had no knowledge about valve maintenance, tuning or electrical work other than what I had plucked from the minds of our engineers. By the end of the 2010 season, the calliope had fallen into an abysmal state. It got to the point where we were getting more complaints about its sound than we were compliments! The time had come to find a new calliope for the boat. Around that time, I became friends with Dave Morecraft, of Peru, IN. Dave’s family had been building metal furniture in town for decades, which had given him an immense knowledge of machining and engineering. Peru itself had also long been a famous circus town, known for its immense shows and parades, complete with calliope wagons. He fell in love with the instrument, and got it in his mind to build them. He used measurements off an old Thomas J. Nichol circus calliope in town, which he affectionately referred to as “Grandpa”, and had built instruments for a number of steamboats, most notably a replacement calliope for the BELLE OF LOUISVILLE and a new instrument for grand overnight steamboat AMERICAN QUEEN. Like Nichol before him, his whistles were constructed with a mixture of brass and copper, giving his instruments a deep, smooth tonal quality, unlike the brassy shrillness of the Frisbie and Wilde calliopes. I went out to Peru and played his personal instrument in the summer of 2010. From that first chord, I knew a Morecraft calliope is what the MINNE needed. Armed with a sample whistle and several videos, I went back home and convinced my Dad and our engineers to give the green light for a new calliope.

By the spring of 2012, the instrument was ready to go. The "MINNE" usually begins her season Memorial Day weekend, and I was determined to have the new calliope playing by then. The week leading up to Memorial Day was our targeted installation date, and what a busy week it was! With the help of friends and fellow calliopists Anthony Benedetto and Zach Morecraft, and our talented welder Henk Overbeek, we pulled the old instrument off and installed the new calliope just in time, getting steam up and doing final testing just the day before! That first weekend was a fun one, filled with live performances by all of us, each more ecstatic than the last to "pluck the plastics". We got a really special treat on Sunday when Marilyn Buehler, the boat's calliope player when the Frisbie was aboard, came down and played a rousing Patriotic Medley. For a lot of the older crew members onboard, listening to her play again brought back a lot of good memories.

Over the next couple of years, some changes were made to the calliope and its operation. In 2013, we got a new keyboard with the ability to be placed out on the instrument. For the first time ever on the "MINNE", a person could play outside and been seen playing, rather than being hidden in the pilothouse. A better sounding instrument and this new keyboard allowed us to start playing underway, giving a enjoyable show to those aboard and those on the shoreline as we passed the hotels on the lakefront. Next, a new pressure regulator was installed, helping the pressure and volume issues we had with the slightly larger Morecraft calliope. Dave imparted a lot of knowledge on us about valve maintenance, whistle care, and winter storage, which helped with the overall operation of the instrument. Our good friend and phenomenal calliope player, Travis C. Vasconcelos, recorded several new medleys for the player unit, which is used when there is not a person available to play live. One of the most requested is his "Phantom of the Opera" medley. In September 2013, we recorded the "MINNE's" first Calliope CD, with songs played by Travis, Anthony Benedetto, and your truly. Between 2015 and 2016, Travis and James Hall, his good friend and electrician extraordinaire, came to Lake George to replace long sections of wire and install a new player unit, replacing the 1993-era floppy disk drive that had been used since the Wilde had been installed.

P.T. Barnum, being the showman he was, figured that a catchier name was needed for it. He decided on the name of the Greek muse of music and epic poetry for his instrument, and from then on, the "American Patented Steam Piano" was known simply as the 'Calliope'.

At the time of this writing, the "MINNE" and her calliope are being prepared for the 2018 sailing season. Soon, the sweet sounds of steam will again echo through the mountain valley, and the dulcet tones of the calliope will bring joy to thousands in a community that has grown fond of its hometown steamboat and her unique American instrument.

al Handyman Presents the 2018
Bass Tournament Hosted by CORTLANDT YACHT CLUB

As I have gotten older, and continue to roam the “river” which I love to do, I realize, more and more the tremendous number of individuals who donate their time, money and energy to supporting the things they love dearly.

In many of these folks lays a latent desire to have others enjoy what they have been enjoying in and around the Hudson River all their lives.

Among the folks that “get it” are the ones that try to influence children. None work harder at that than Pat Harbolic, and Tom Colandro, who, with a number of other volunteers, created the Haverstraw Bay Classic, a striped bass derby with emphasis on teaching children about the tremendous population of healthy, vibrant, fish their are in the Hudson River!

April 27, 28, 29, and 2018 all this came together with over $12,000 in prizes, 230 entries, over 30 volunteers and the complete cooperation of the Cortlandt Yacht Club who donated their beautiful clubhouse to the event.

The winner of the top prize in the youth division was Nick Bartelemeo who not only won the kayak but a load of supplies to go with it! He is the perfect age to use this fishing kayak anywhere he feels it is safe enough to do so. Matts Sporting Goods of Haverstraw, NY, donated the prize.

With over 130 people at the windup dinner the volunteers in the kitchen and at the grill had their hands full.

I can tell you folks that were not there this was the smoothest most professional windup of a fishing event that I have witness in doing over 100 of these events.

If it gets better than this in 2019 you will be sorry you missed the upcoming event.

The fishing was not as hot and heavy as in past years. The bunker had not arrived in the river, the weather was cold and windy, but these folks managed to catch a few winning stripers.

These two men Butchey Gilmore and Joe Disclafani produced enough hot dogs, hamburgers and delicious fresh caught striped bass to satisfy the huge crowd that attended the windup awards ceremony!

May 12th, 2018 had to be one of the worst days to hold a fishing contest yet, because of the tremendous warmth and “heart” of everyone concerned, turned in to the most successful Hudson River Fisherman Association gathering we ever had. Over 60 people showed up, braved the pouring rain, smiling, happy and ready to catch fish. And catch fish they did, over 35 catfish, stripers, perch, carp were caught, weighed and released back into the Hudson River. This in a matter of 3 hours of dismal, to say the least, bad weather.

It is the goal of the HRFA to introduce children in particular, as well as their parents, to the joys of fishing and this certainly was accomplished on this Saturday.

Thanks to the Wounded Warrior Project every child who attended received a high quality rod. First, Second, and Third place winners received many more fishing items. Congratulations to all, especially the Wounded Warriors who attended despite the weather!

Gil Hawkins, HRFA, (In his home made rain coat) and Simone, wife of one of the Wounded Warriors who attended. While this lady had never fished before she picked up on it quickly and did manage to catch a few fish.

PURE JOY!

The huge smile, and arm load of fishing equipment won while fishing, at the 3rd annual Wounded Warrior Catfish Derby, says it all! Luncheon held at the hospitable Billy Joe's Rib Works deck in Newburgh, NY.

Mrs. Nancy Schiliro, Alumni Specialist for the Wounded Warrior Project, doing a chant for the rain to stop while Schot Havner in charge of the event for the HRFA encourages her.

The luncheon of over 60 wounded warriors from all walks of life enjoyed the hospitality of lunch after a few hours on the cold, wet deck of Billy Joe's Rib Works. A resounding success to a very eventful day for everyone.

Eels: The Creatures from the Sargasso Sea!

A 3,000 mile trip to reach Albany.

by Garrett McCarey

The eel is not a very likable creature at first glance. It is secretive, snake-like, slimy, and, as those who have inadvertently caught one while angling know, very, very strong. It is the last thing you want to see on your fishing line! My take on eels has always been one of wonderment as one of my earliest childhood memories is of watching young eels (elvers) climbing straight up a small dam on a tiny creek across the street from where I lived. What were these things? As a boy I caught the adult eel in the Oscawana brook behind our house in Putnam Valley. Fishing for them was particularly good when “they let the pool go” which meant that upstream Floradan Lodge opened the gateway of their brook-dammed swimming pool to clear the silt. The now dark brown and swirling waters of our usually pristine brook brought out the eels which we caught with a ball of dough from squeezed Wonderbread or a nice fat night crawler. We skinned them and roasted them over an open fire, as we did with any fish we caught, unaware of their arduous journey or unlikely life history.

Which brings us back as to why we were standing in the tidal entrance of the ice cold Poestenkill in Troy, NY just a few miles south of Lock One, the terminus of the estuarine Hudson River.

A local fisherman who was scouting the kill for any sign of herrings saw the fyke net and asked “you catching bait?”

It was a cold late April day as my trusted companions, Molly, Samantha and Lilly, ages nine through twelve, and I waded through the 39 degree water of the Poestenkill to our fyke net. With help from Jeff Briggs, a volunteer from the Rensselaer Plateau Association, we emptied its cod end into the bucket. Nothing! Was it the late Spring or the recent rains? The herring were not running yet so perhaps in a few days...

And what was our intended quarry? Eels, baby eels, little creatures with glassine bodies only two or three inches long. Eels that are in the home stretch of a miraculous journey of some 1500 miles!

"Nope. Eels"

"Whatcha doin' that for?"

"To count 'em"

He gave us a puzzled look and headed home. His interest was in the run of herrings which he would use as bait for Striped Bass. The bass follow the herring upriver.

Yes, we were there to count eels.

The American Eel (Anguilla rostrata) is a diadromous fish, capable of living in both freshwater and seawater as are striped bass, shad and other herring species. It's the alewife that the fisherman was looking for as baitfish. The difference between these fish and the eel is that they are anadromous, living their adult lives in saltwater and returning to freshwater only to spawn, though some say there is a resident population of stripers in the river. The eel, on the other hand, lives its adult life in freshwater and returns to the sea to spawn. The adult eels are called brown or yellow eels and when sexually mature, the age is unclear but it could be eight to fifteen years, they become silver eels with bulging eyes, darkened backs and a silver sheen to their bellies and they head downstream.

James Prosek in his book "Eels...the world's most mysterious fish" describes a working eelman in the Delaware River where, under a new moon and after a good rain in September, thousands of silver eels begin their migration back to the sea and his year long work on his stone weir finally pays off on these two nights. And where are the eels headed? The Sargasso Sea. This is an area in the Atlantic Ocean between the Gulf Stream that includes the Bermuda Triangle. Known as the graveyard of lost ships this becalmed sea is covered with a mass of algae, plastic and other flotsam. It is here, at depths of 1,300 to 2,300 feet that the eels, both the American and the European varieties, spawn. No one knows exactly where this happens or what triggers it. This has got to be some wild eel party!

The eel eggs hatch into little leaf-like transparent water creatures called leptocephali and after a year of drifting over the continental shelf they metamorphose into glass eels which then swim up the rivers and tributaries. This was what we were after!

We were working as citizen scientists through the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) and I was a volunteer working for NATURE Lab, a project of the Sanctuary for Independent Media in Troy, NY. I had heard of the Eel Project and thought it would be a great way for the community to learn about the Hudson River. There is no better classroom than the great outdoors where learning to become wet and dirty is an essential part of the syllabus. I contacted their Citizen Science group in the Hudson River Estuary Program and, much to my surprise, they thought that a week long trial run in the Poestenkill was a good idea as their most northern sampling station was in Ravena on the Hannacroix Creek about a half hour South of Albany. (They did a trial run in the Wynantskill near Troy in 2017 with no success.) The Eel Project began in 2008 with two sites and now has 14 sites sampling the Hudson River's tributaries by over 750 volunteers and students. Our team included students from Dan Capuano's Ecology class at Hudson Valley Community College, and students from RPI, Russell Sage and Skidmore and the three girls from Brittonkill Elementary School that I enlisted by promising them a life changing experience.

After five days of sampling we caught two pigmented elvers about five inches long but no glass eels. It was still great fun, putting on waders or hip boots (Molly's leaked) and pulling up the net but we really needed to see this near mythical life form that we were pursuing. So I headed down to Hannacroix Creek where, at low tide, a half a dozen volunteers from the New Baltimore Conservancy converged.

Among them was a visitor from England who wanted to replicate the Eel project in her home country as the European Eel's numbers have been decimated to ten per cent of its population. Unlike in America, eels are prized as culinary delicacies in Europe and East Asia and with the Asian eel population also severely compromised there is a huge and very profitable market for glass eels from Europe. Eelers can "rake in" $1500 to $2500 (£1100 to £1800) per pound. These eels are shipped to Asia and raised in aquaculture ponds as there is no known way of producing eel eggs in a laboratory. In the U.S. there are only two states, North Carolina and Maine, that allow elver and glass eel fishing. On Cape Cod authorities are on high alert for eel poachers coming down from Boston to earn a few grand in this illegal and lucrative market. This why the eel population in the tributaries need to be monitored.

The Hannacroix crew was ready for another catch as numerous as they had had the day before. I was ready to see the elusive glass eel and, Holy Poseidon!, did I see them. It took the team two and a half hours to count 3,557 eels, a mass of slithering wormlike beasts. The eels were quite the hit and we showed them to anyone who might be remotely interested. And they were. These eels were deemed "cute", "amazing", "unbelievable." This was a far cry from the word association one would normally get from the word "eel." A small success. These are animals you would never see in your lifetime even in the largest and most well stocked aquariums of the world. And they are right here in our backyard.

On Friday our trial week was up and we were going to remove the net. Gracie and Aidan from DEC came up to do the deed. I felt we had failed, but wait! There were herring in the kill and the temperature had risen to 48 degrees. There was more! Gracie pointed out that the fyke net was coated with herring eggs and, look around, the low tide exposed rocks and the creek bottom covered with them, millions of eggs in a layer an inch thick! I had never seen such a sight in my life. But the best thing of all – we caught a glass eel! One glass eel. We were ecstatic. We considered keeping the net in for another week but the students were in the midst of studying for finals and if we caught as many eels as they had downriver we would be severely short handed.

We took the little guy or gal up the kill past the Poestenkill Gorge and set it free above the dam near the cemetery. After such a long journey of so many thousands of miles we gave this traveler a bit of a break, it wouldn't have to climb the falls. It was home free.

The great news is that Aidan thought we should continue to sample next year, perhaps for the full extent of the run. That one little eel did the trick, I think. If we do sample we'll need all the help we can get. If you're interested in sampling in 2019 please get in touch with the NATURE Lab, believe me, you will not regret it and the "Creatures from the Sargasso Sea" will be better for it.

For information and data on the Eel Project go to WWW.DEC.NY.GOV and search for "eel project".

To become a volunteer eel counter on the Poestenkill go to MEDIASANCTUARY.ORG and click on NATURE Lab.

THE WALL THAT HEALS

THE WALL THAT HEALS, A 375- FOOT REPLICA OF THE VIETNAM VETERANS MEMORIAL ALONG WITH A MOBILE EDUCATION CENTER, IS SCHEDULED TO VISIT THE
CITY OF NEWBURGH | AUGUST 2ND TO AUGUST 5TH
ON THE NEWBURGH WATERFRONT

The Wall That Heals honors the more than three million Americans who served in the U.S Armed forces during the Vietnam War and it bears the name of the more than 58,000 men and women who made the ultimate sacrifice.

When The Wall was dedicated in 1982, visitors began making rubbings of the names on The Wall. This began the tradition of visitors taking home a name rubbing as a keepsake of their visit. Paper and pencils will be provided.

The 53-foot trailer that carries The Wall That Heals transforms to become a mobile Education Center. The exterior of the trailer features a timeline of "The War and The Wall" and provides additional information about the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C. Additional exhibits give visitors a better understanding of the legacy of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and the collection of items left at The Wall.

Liberty Landing Marina

(Western Shore in Jersey City, NJ)

201-985-8000, www.LibertyLandingMarina.com

Situated on the Morris Canal in Jersey City at the Statue of Liberty, Liberty Landing Marina's headquarters are located on a large Historical steel lightship. The light- ship has been restored to immaculate condition. What's interesting about this marina and the Liberty State Park adjacent to it is the casual, almost country atmosphere while having the most Spectacular views of the Manhattan Skyline anywhere in New York Harbor. The upper deck of the lightship is used for catered affairs. A water taxi service is available alongside the Lightship to New York City and Jersey City. Individuals and groups find the protected waters of the Morris Canal a desirable location for any kind of rendezvous. There is nothing quite like this anywhere in New York Harbor. Transient docking available $4 per square foot + electric. If dining at the Liberty House or MaritimeParc free docking offered 2 hours max.

Silver Spoon Cafe

124 Main St, Cold Spring, NY 10516,

845-265-2525

email: hussein252544@yahoo.com

This eleven year old cafe has been completely remodeled to compliment Cold Spring and the surrounding stores and restaurants!

"I have eaten at this restaurant many times over the past few years and found the food to be excellent and reasonably priced!" - John H. Vargo, Publisher. Much of the menu is exclusive to the Silver Spoon Cafe. From the Big Daddy Burger, Maryland Crab Soup, served in a large bread, steaks and fresh seafood, this cafe has it all. You might also like to try the Navajo wrap made with Cajun golden chicken, spicy chapel, and other wonderful tasty ingredients. It is open seven days a week for breakfast, lunch and dinner. At Silver Spoon we believe in fresh local foods, that's why we source our ingredients from the Hudson Valley, including Feather Ridge Farm, Hudson Valley Fresh, Coach Farm, Crown maple, Sky Farms, Starling yards and many more. All of our mews are made in house to insure the best tasting and highest quality of food.

Sporting Clubs fought to protect Hudson Valley's rivers and streams throughout the 20th Century.

by
Violet Snow

From the Woodstock Times
hudsonvalleyone.com

By the end of the 19th century, when the tanning industry had clear-cut hemlocks from Catskills forests, and abandoned farms left big expanses of pasture, there were no wild turkeys in the mountains, and deer had nearly disappeared. Runoff from bare mountain slopes and pollution of creeks by the sludge from the tanneries, combined with over-fishing, had driven the remaining Esopus Creek trout high into the headwaters.

In the 1920s, when the Phoenicia Fish and Game Association was formed, followed by the Upper Esopus Rod and Gun Club and Stony Clove Rod and Gun Club, one of their goals was conservation and restoration of the land. On Saturday, April 28, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m., the Phoenicia Library will present "Sporting Clubs, Saviors of our Catskill Rivers," by Austin "Mac" Francis, author of Catskill Rivers and Land of Little Rivers, and Bethia Waterman, co-founder of the Jerry Bartlett Memorial Angling Collection and administrator of the library's Angling Parlor.

While issues such as gun control, the proposed Belleayre Resort project, and the Ashokan Rail Trail tend to polarize local residents, it's instructive to be reminded that people on both sides of these controversies have always had a love of the land and nature as their primary motivation. In the bylaws of the Upper Esopus club, one of their purposes was "to promote protection of woods, waters, and wildlife." The clubs stocked the woods with game birds and the streams with fish — over 177,000 fish in 1952 alone — and they fought legal battles to restore health to the creeks.

In the 1970s, the Phoenicia club joined Catskill Waters, an organization formed to protest the lack of regulation over the release of water from the Schoharie Reservoir, through the Shandaken tunnel and into the Esopus Creek, aimed at maintaining levels in the Ashokan Reservoir, part of New York City's drinking water system. New York City Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) was opening and closing the portal according to the needs of the reservoirs, creating a rapidly fluctuating environment on the Esopus. Excessive water flow, which drove the fish into hiding, was followed by complete stoppage of water that left the fish stranded and dying along the banks.

Fly-fishing on the Esopus. Photo: Dion Ogust

In 1976, Chuck Schwartz, president of the Phoenicia club, wrote to then state assemblyman Maurice Hinchey, "I have personally rescued over a hundred wild fingerling brown and rainbow trout along with various minnows, crawfish and insect larvae. Other trout and their food were not so fortunate and were left to dry out and die in the afternoon sun...These trout were wild, and consider the tremendous amount of insect life which support these trout that were also destroyed. This food cannot be replaced and it may take years to rebuild."

After seven years of pressure, the New York State legislature passed regulations that required DEP to moderate the release of water through the Shandaken portal, preventing the intense fluctuations that were so devastating to the fish. DEP fought the changes, but the legislation spearheaded by Catskill Waters opened the way for regulation at other reservoirs in the city water system.

One response to the degradation of the environment in the 1800s was the purchase of tracts of land by wealthy individuals. Conflict erupted between landowners and local people who no longer had access to the land they had hunted and fished for generations. When gamekeepers caught poachers on property owned by Clarence Roof in Neversink — where the Frost Valley YMCA camp is now located — sympathetic juries refused to convict the hunters. At least one trial was taken out of town, resulting in a $70 fine for the poachers. "We think that was the start of posting property," said Waterman.

However, the wealthy landowners also formed private sporting clubs that have contributed to the preservation of rivers. The Anglers Club of New York, created in 1906, has a conservation committee. "Most of the private clubs own water," said Francis, who described how Ed Van Put of the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) approached private landowners on the Lower Beaverkill and other streams. "He persuaded them to sell access to the water so there could be fishing on it by anyone, as long as they obeyed rules. All the clubs, whether public or private, do feel strongly about preserving the pristineness, the sanctity, the heritage they're part of."

On April 28, Waterman and Francis will go deeper into the history of local public and private clubs, telling stories of fishermen and the activities of the clubs, especially the Phoenicia association, organized by the Breithaupts, Hillsons, and Longyears. Their talk will be recorded by Silver Hollow Audio through a grant from Catskill Watershed Corporation (CWC), which is funded by the DEP. The grant is the third in a series that has allowed lectures on the history of fishing in the Catskills to be recorded and placed, along with transcripts, on the Angling Parlor website. "It's an effective way of archiving local history," said Waterman. In last October's program, Bob Decker described how his father caught the elusive and wily fish known as Old Bess in 1955, and Ed Kahil reminisced about growing up at Rainbow Lodge in its heyday of hosting hunters and fisherfolk. Fishing legend, author, and talented storyteller Nick Lyons gave a second presentation in December.

ALEX SALOMATOFF HAS THE ANSWERS TO YOUR BOAT QUESTIONS!

If you have a question for Master Mechanic and Owner of Alex's Marine Plus in New Windsor, NY, simply call Alex at 845-565-9199 or e-mail, AlexsMarine@aol.com

One thing that you should never forget is a boarding ladder.

Laugh, but the second you are in the water by accident or design, and suddenly you realize that you never considered a boarding ladder, could mean big trouble depending on the circumstances!

We at Alex marine, can fit your boat with the proper boarding ladder or upgrade the one that you now have so that children, seniors, and everyone in-between can get back on the boat without much hassle.

The range of boarding ladders is incredible, there is even one for dogs! Rather than you try to figure out what you need just give us a call or, better yet discuss the boarding ladder while we are doing other work on your boat. It is much easier to do it then rather than taking the boat out just to install a boarding ladder.

Your Insurance with Cathy Karas

Cathy J. Karas, Certified Insurance Counselor, President, Karas Insurance Agencies Inc, 321 So. Riverside Ave., Croton-on-Hudson, NY 10520

Many of you are experienced boaters, some having taken the Coast Guard, Power Squadron, Boater's Safety or Captain's Licensing classes. Like driving a car or riding a bicycle, once you set out on your trip, you may be on auto pilot and may not be as careful or as observant as you should be. Even if you are sure you are the most knowledgeable operator, with many years of experience operating all types of crafts, it is often the other guy or gal, that causes the problem. You have no control over what another boater might do, and as many of us have experienced, they often perform the most dangerous and unexpected maneuver at the last minute. Crossing our path, throwing up a wake, passing on the wrong side, and unsafe speed are a few examples of what you can expect. What type of boating education and insurance is required, you might wonder. Very little, at least in New York State.

You need to take a boating education class to operate a personal watercraft if you are at least 14 years old. The card certifying you have successfully completed the class has to be carried with you as the Coast Guard or Police can stop you and request to see this. They are also entitled to come on board to see if you have all the required, approved safety equipment which includes flares, flag, fire extinguisher and life vest for each passenger. But also, the website for the New York Boater's Guide Laws and Regulations states that you can operate a PWC if you have not taken the course but are accompanied by someone 18 or older who has and has the card with them. Operation of a PWC if you are under 14 is prohibited. Even scarier is the provision that a person at least 10 years old can operate a recreational boat (other than a PWC), so long as they have taken the boater's safety course, or are with someone that has and has the card with them. The thought of a 10 year old being able operate any type of recreational boat other than a PWC, who may have little to no experience is unbelievable to me.

The other issue is that unlike car insurance, New York State does not require boat insurance. You may be required to have it if you have a loan and the lender wants to be sure their interest is protected, or a marina or boat club may require you have liability insurance in the event you cause property damage or bodily injury through your “negligence”. So, as you can imagine, there are many boats and PWCs out there with no insurance if there is no loan and not stored at a marina or club, as then insurance is voluntary. What is your exposure as an owner if you do not have insurance? You may operate your boat in a way that causes damage to another boat or dock or cause injury to a passenger on your boat, another boat, someone in the water or on the dock or shore. An electrical malfunction on your boat could set off a chain reaction causing many boats to burn. A waterskiier could be struck or a passenger on your own boat could lose their balance and fall into the water, hitting their head causing severe injury. The list goes on of the potential catastrophic incidents that could result in a law suit. A watercraft policy can provide coverage and legal defense costs for you to protect you and your assets. Think about the total of your assets, which may include a home, car(s), boat(s), investments and even a future salary that could be garnished.

What can you do about protecting yourself with insurance from the uninsured or underinsured boater? Most watercraft policies that you can buy for your own boat or PWC have a coverage called under or insured boater liability. You can usually purchase a limit equal to the liability limit you have selected for your own boat, which can either be called bodily injury liability or protection and indemnity insurance. I have not seen any New York insurance contract that provides property damage coverage, that would pay for damage to your own boat by underinsured or uninsured liability, only for bodily injury to you or your passengers. I would think it a good idea not only to buy the highest limit of bodily injury coverage not only for yourself, but also for the uninsured and under insured boaters to protect you from these hazardous boat and PWC operators. You may not think the cost of medical attention is not a concern since you have your own medical insurance, but it is very possible at some time you may have a passenger on your boat with no medical insurance where this coverage would provide insurance coverage for medical costs if the other negligent operator was found to be at fault and with no insurance or a low limit that was insufficient to pay for the passengers injuries. This is a coverage you can buy to provide insurance for injuries to yourself and your passengers and not rely on another boater’s policy to respond, who caused the loss, where there might not even be a policy.

The presence of Coast Guard and Police Boats seems to be more prevalent since 9/11, so be aware of your speed with regards to distance to shoreline, that you have the boater’s safety course card with you if by age you are required to have taken it as I have outlined above. Be aware that a ticket or fine can appear on your New York driver’s license and then affect your car insurance premium with a surcharge, if you receive a moving violation, such as speeding.

Start the season safely making sure you have the proper education requirements fulfilled, an insurance policy with adequate limits of coverage and knowledge of the speed limits and rules of safe operation!

I'm an "airplane nut: I've loved airplanes ever since I can remember. I like to see them sailing through the sky, read about them (I have a LOT of books) and look at pictures of them, and go to air shows to look at and take pictures of them (An interesting aside: I once took a flying lesson in a small light plane, probably a Cessna. I expected to love it, but did not like it at all: go figure.).

I went through a "train thing"—Lionel, HO gauge, real trains—for a while, but that has faded. And, as a teen-ager, with my first driver's license, I became a "car nut". I still am—I've never owned a "cookie-cutter" "plain jane" car—my cars, from the get-go, have all been "special" in one way or the other: from a dual four-barrel carburetor Plymouth Fury (110 miles-per-hour in second gear through the drag strip traps) to a 56.5 miles-per-gallon made-by-Mercedes Smart Car with trick after-market stainless steel dual pipes.

Back to airplanes: in all my readings, and personal encounters, anyone who joins the US Air Force and wants to fly—surprise, surprise—wants to fly fighters, be they P-51 Mustangs back in the day, or F-100 Super Sabres, or F-22's. But, everybody, for a lot of reasons, isn't qualified to fly fighters. So, in all my readings, and personal encounters, many of these folks end up in the next best thing: in the left seat (or right seat) of bombers, lumbering along, while the spiffy fighters do S-turns up above.

I don't think I've ever read of anyone, or heard anyone say, that they always wanted to fly cargo/transport planes. "Boy, I've always wanted to fly a C-82 Flying Box Car..."

And, how many C-82 Flying Box Cars have you ever seen at an air show, or in a War Birds book????? But...fighter planes are glamorous, bombers do what has to be done to win wars, but if it wasn't for the unsung workhorse transport planes, back there behind the scenes, none of the bullets, bombs, or beans get flown to where they have to be.

Over the past several years we've passed Dover Air Force Base in Delaware many many times on our way to Maryland and back. For a long time there were lines of huge, grey C-5A's parked on the tarmac. They've been replaced by huge, grey C-17's. And, at the southern end of the base there's a big collection of older cargo/transport planes parked outside a big Air Mobility Command Museum hangar.

I do have a bit of a history with modern-day transports: Kath and I once flew to Quantico in a LOUD Marine Corps KC-130 Hercules (gotta love those Herks!), and I once sat in the radio operator's seat in a Stewart Air Force Base 105th Airlift Wing C-5A, heading for Lackland AFB, a Brigadier General in the left seat, a full bird Colonel in the right. I was like a kid on Christmas morning when they pushed those throttles forward on Stewart's LONG runway.

Back to Dover: usually we were in a rush to get to Maryland, or, back home. But one day we turned off Exit 91 on DE1/US 113 and followed the brown museum signs. We passed a T-33A jet trainer inside the entrance (admission is FREE), and after we parked I practically ran out of the car towards the planes on display on the tarmac. There are "over 30" airlifters, refuelers, jets, helicopters, and gliders, a one-time Vice Presidential jet, and a B-17G and C-47.

We passed a maintenance shed on the way, and poked our noses inside. Right by the door was a Rolls Royce Merlin V-1650 P-51 Mustang engine; I'd never seen one outside an airplane. I touched it; I was, in a word, thrilled: to me, the North American P-51D Mustang is the fighter plane of all time. I've actually dreamt that I was up there flying a P-51D (a good thing the dream ended before I had to figure out how to land it: where was the landing gear switch; the flaps; the throttle???) . Not knocking the C-82's or C-119's, but I've never dreamt of being in the left seat of a Flying Boxcar.

Hey, isn't that a C-97??? And a C-119??? A HUGE C-124 Globemaster!!! Wow, an A-26 Invader! A C-54, and a Lockheed Super Constellation. Kath probably thought I had gone nuts, all wide-eyed and snapping pictures... of transport planes!!!

We finally went inside the hangar. Yah just gotta love poking around inside a B-17, wondering what it could possibly be like in the ball turret, and for the cramped, lonely tail gunner. Over 12,000 B-17 Flying Fortresses were produced during World War II. More B-24's were made, but the B-17's (think Memphis Bell) always got the press. At the time of our visit, only about 40 B-17's existed in museums; only about a dozen were still flying.

The B-17G in the Dover museum, Serial Number 44-83624, has an interesting history. It was one of the last B-17's on active duty in the Air Force. In 1957, it was retired to the Air Force Museum at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. It was disassembled at the museum, and flown to Dover in a C-5 (!) in 1989. It was restored over a seven year period as the 381st Bomb Group "Sleepy Time Gal". It's a beauty.

Facing it is an olive drab C-47 with black and white "invasion stripes" on the fuselage and wings. The C-47 is a military version of the Douglas DC-3 airliner, that first flew on December 17, 1935. The first C-47 flew on December 23, 1941, and 10,174 were built. Some DC-3's/C-47's are, amazingly, still in service today, particularly in the Southern Hemisphere.

The AMC museum C-47A Skytrain, Serial Number 42-92841, was rejected by other museums as "beyond salvage". It has been restored as the World War II 61st Troop Carrier Squadron "Turf & Sport Special". On D-Day, June 6, 1944, it delivered 82nd Airborne Division paratroopers to St. Mère-Église.

This was a great visit, and I was sooooo glad we finally stopped in, and paid homage to the Air Mobility Command. If you're an airplane nut and are ever down that way, pull over: you'll be glad you did.

Lock One Marina and Shipyard (461 Hudson River Rd, Waterford, NY 12188, (518) 238-1321, www.lockonemarinaandshipyard.com) offers a laid back, quiet place to stop just a short way into the Champlain Canal, with professional mechanics and boat hauling services available, plus fuel and other amenities. If you're looking to meet some new friends and experience the canal lifestyle, you might wish to keep your boat here for a weekend...or a lifetime!

by Pete Bardunias President/CEO, the Chamber of Southern Saratoga County

Trips on the canal system can be a lot of fun, especially this year when celebrations are planned to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the modern Canal System (1918-2018). There are festivals galore all year long, plus great accommodations for your boat, (or your family if you wish to get off the boat for a day or two), fine dining, quick meals and ice cream, recreation venues, and more. The key to finding any/all of the above is to obtain advice and information from the locals who know their area best and are eager to share their insight with visitors!

If your cruising plans involve the Hudson River/Champlain Canal or the first twenty miles or so of the Mohawk River/Erie Canal, you're in luck. The Chamber of Southern Saratoga County (CSSC), its members and local partners maintain some great displays of

If your plans involve trailering the boat up, you can even stop at the Southern Saratoga Information Center at the Clifton Park Rest Area (between Exits 9-10) on the I-87 Northway. With local knowledge, you'll know which restaurant serves your favorite or is open later, where the nearby hotels are, how to find trails, historic artifacts, and other services. Your trip will come alive as you experience the hidden stories not found in most history books about the Battle of Saratoga, the Industrial Revolution or the Information Age. You'll catch fish in secluded, quiet waters or explore a trail that once carried Sal the Mule and his compatriots for hundreds of miles, carefully maintained over a century after its decommissioning. Snake Oil, Floor Wax, Shine Glo, Clear Coat

Frequently people call me about fade on their boat and want the gelcoat to look shiny and nice again. There are many variables and steps involved in order to get gelcoat looking good again. You will not find a remedy to get rid of fade at a big box store! Most importantly the popular boat related forums relating to color restoration are often terrible advice!

A boat, very well known and well built in 2006 was brought to me for color restoration and gelcoat repairs. The gelcoat colors on it are mainly white with black accent stripes.

Above the rub rail the narrow black gelcoat faded and chalked to a grey and was in badly need of color restoration. The owner told me he compounded and buffed it each year but it never really looked good and the fade always came back quickly. He also had a boat repair facility try to get rid of the fade and improve the gelcoat on it as well. Photos show their process didn't work very well.

I began to examine the surface closely and noticed paint brush like strokes on the surface and thought some type of substance was applied for a quick fix. As the boat owner watched I compounded a small section to see if I could get the color back. As I continued a layer of white oxidation began to disappear revealing the original color. The brush strokes diminished but they and a fine misty discoloration remained. The compound was not aggressive enough so I went a step further and wet sanded the section using a high quality 1500 grit sand paper. The nice rich gelcoat came back. It took sand paper to get the mess off the boat. I determined some type of "snake oil" solution I call it was applied and I know what it is. All I can say is that it begins with the letter "V". I tested this "V" product many years ago and determined it was nothing but a short lived mask. It may look good for a few weeks but it's truly garbage and advertising misleading. By applying this junk it added an extra expense to the boat restoration.

GELCOAT COLOR RESTORATION

Why does gel coat fade and chalk?

Gelcoat has a porous surface and fades because of UV sunlight penetration.

Degrees of fading will vary depending on color; darker colors, e.g.; red, maroon, green, dk. blue all have large amounts of pigment will fade faster than lighter colors. White and lighter tone gelcoat will often appear "chalked" after years of sun exposure.

Can gelcoat be restored to its original color? In most cases gelcoat color can be restored. I suggest doing it rather than re-gel coating because remember gelcoat is suppose to be between 10-18 mil thick. An excessive amount of gelcoat is likely to crack, aka crazing & spider cracking.

What's the procedure?

The degree of fade will determine the method of gelcoat restoration. Here is the basic process.

I test spot an area starting with a professional grade gelcoat compound. If that does not remove the fade I will wet sand using a machine with special 1500 grit sandpaper specially designed for fine finish sanding and use a sanding block for hard to get small areas. During the process the sandpaper is completely saturated with water. If the fade is still present after testing with 1500 gt., I will then use the special 1000 gt wet sandpaper. If I use 1000 gt I have to go back over the area using 1500 gt. Side note- I will not use any coarser than 600 gt. paper. I work in an area 1 sq. ft at a time all the way around the boat being very consistent on how much sanding is done. The gelcoat must be sanded evenly otherwise the boat will look like a leopard. If 600 gt is removing the fade, 1000 gt is used next. Depending on finish desired I will use 1500 and 2000 gt . Final applications are professional grades of compound, sealer glaze to seal pores and good UV protecting wax.

In a situation when gelcoat is so deeply faded that it cannot be restored, a regel is done. The preparation for new gelcoat requires some of the existing gelcoat to be removed to stay within desired gelcoat mil. This process can run into big dollars as it is extremely time consuming!

As I have said many times the best way to protect gelcoat and prevent fade is to keep it waxed with a good UV protecting wax and cover it as best as you can. I recommend that the canvas cover fit over the rub rail. Any unprotected gelcoat left exposed to the sun will oxidize.

The tempting "easy restoration fix" will cost you more money in the end!
